Transient Receptor Potential Protein Transient receptor potential, ion channels (TRP) are a family of membrane proteins first discovered in Drosophila in 2000 by Tracey Nilius & Antonio Rigo as a family of non-selective cation channels that are mutated in a number of inherited disorders associated with temperature sensitivity [1-3]. Recently, human homologs of Drosophila TRPs were identified [4]. This family of proteins is found in organisms ranging from archaea to humans [5]. A thorough search on the human genome reveals more than 50 genes. So far only six have been well studied so far: six members of the TRP family named TRP1-TRP6 [6-8] (Schematic of TRP protein family described by Maruyama et al. [9]). TRP channel is a principal signaling mechanism and is comprised of six transmembrane segments called TRP domains, TRP domain is in an extracellular region and linked to the cytoplasmic side by four-helix bundles [10]. Domain 1 is composed of one to seven ankyrin repeats. The N terminal and C terminal domains contain TRP domain. TRP family proteins are non-selective cation channels. TRP2 plays a role in a number of ocular conditions including, glaucoma, proliferation of cells, regulation of epithelial cell growth, and differentiation. Although many TRP channels including TRP2 are involved in pain perception, the exact roles of most TRPs in the development of acute pain and chronic pain have not been studied well and remain unclear. TRP2 is a non-selective cation channel that is expressed in the skin and by sensory neurons in the periphery. It is activated by histamine, bradykinin, endothelin-1, 5-hydroxytryptamine, lysophosphatidic acid, and ATP [11]. TRP2 was shown to be involved in multiple biological functions, such as inflammation, mechanosensation, cell differentiation and proliferation, and regulation of blood pressure, thermoregulation, blood flow, and metabolism [11]. TRP2 plays a role in pain and the mechanism that is now known is these channels, TRP2 are sensitive to inflammatory mediators (bradykinin, PGE2, and substance P) and as a result, TRP2 stimulates the release of calcitonin gene-related

CALGARY — A search warrant has been executed at the Calgary-based farm where two horses died from laminitis after competing in the last weekend's International Horse Trials. The search warrant was executed at the residence of Rollie Milburn, the president of the farrier association. It was executed Sunday afternoon following an update from the RCMP to the association, which initially withheld information. "We have been kept in the dark about many things," association President Rollie Milburn said. The owner of the farm, Sophie Whittington, has not been charged with any crimes and is not considered a suspect, RCMP Cpl. Gordon Chua said. "We're still investigating the circumstances around the horses and the course of events that led to the horse's death," he said. "At this time there are no charges pending and no one has been arrested." Chua said it's still unclear where the horses were from and where they came from. "Our thoughts are with the horses' families," he said. In a news release, Whittington said, "I am devastated by this sudden loss. "I feel truly sorry for the Whittington horses and their families. I will continue to help the RCMP investigation in any way that I can." The other horse was treated for laminitis during the horse trials on Saturday night. The third horse suffered from heat exhaustion on Saturday. Families from both countries are making arrangements to travel here. The RCMP said in a news release Sunday evening they seized a heat gun that may have been used to try to protect the horses from the sun during the trials. RCMP said the association provided them information at the request of Whittington. "I would like to apologize to anyone who may have been affected by this event," Whittington said in the release. "We made mistakes and we want to assure the public that we regret any mistake we made in caring for the horses during the trials." The search warrant was executed after the RCMP received a tip about the animals, Chua said. It's unclear if the tip came from a member of the public or from the association. The farm has agreed to be checked for pest infestations, Chua said.
