Zero budget farming - 3 Books written by Subhash Palekar and translated in English, Malayalam, Kannada, Tamil, Telugu. Circulating biomarkers and cardiovascular disease incidence and progression: a systematic review and meta-analysis. We sought to provide a systematic review and meta-analysis of the association between circulating biomarkers and the incidence and progression of coronary artery disease (CAD). We performed a systematic review of observational studies (cohort and case-control designs) using MEDLINE, CINAHL, EMBASE, Cochrane Library and the World Wide Web of Science. Primary outcomes were incident CAD and progression of CAD. Risk of bias of individual studies was assessed using the Quality in Prognosis Studies tool, and overall risk of bias across studies was assessed using the Newcastle-Ottawa scale. Meta-analyses were performed if available and we conducted predefined subgroup and sensitivity analyses, which explored the stability of study results, threshold effect and publication bias. We included 48 eligible studies, of which 30 reported on incident CAD and 20 reported on CAD progression. Additional pre-specified subgroup analyses indicated a significant association between risk markers and CAD incidence in women (95% CI 0.95-1.08), and with progression of CAD in asymptomatic individuals (HR 1.72, 95% CI 1.03-2.85), low-risk patients (95% CI 1.48-2.58) and overall CAD (95% CI 1.13-1.47). Study quality and publication bias were of borderline significance. In conclusion, prospective studies indicate a significant association between circulating biomarkers and CAD incidence and progression. More well-designed studies are needed to provide a clearer view.
